Overview:

Recall requires traceability data that tells what food is in the stream, where it is located and recall systems must be able to provide such information in real time. Reducing recall time means reducing illness, the loss of life and damage to the industry's reputation.

Why should you Attend:

In this session, you will learn how to tie those data requirements and other food safety information to your traceability system and to work with your supply chain to provide an effective implementation.

This digital traceability session will cover the nature and advantages of supply chain digital traceability and many of the concepts as well as the current and future hardware and software technological innovations.

Areas Covered in the Session:

Data In the Cloud vs Data Privately Held
Linking Traceability to Food Safety and Recall Data
Item, Case, Pallet and Container Level Traceability
Identity, Temperature, Location, Inventory and Maintenance Data
Bar Code, Wireless, RFID, Cell Phone, Satellite
